With self-interest optimization consideration, the mining companies always ignore the mining environment's protection in their own exploration and production, which contaminates the land resources, water resources and the air. The government also neglects local citizens' legitimate right to survive and develop with the same thought. On the basis of humanism and sustainable development of the economic society, the thesis analyzes current situation in the mining environmental protection, the deep reasons why mining area had so many problems, and proposes the subsequent legislative measures, such as specifying the legal hierarchy of "Mining Resources Law", which should be the basic and most important law of mining resources, adding "mining environment treatment and recovery" in the revised edition of "Mining Resources Law", stating the social responsibility of Mining Companies, protecting local citizens' basic rights with public attending the law enforcement system, and establishing public interest litigation on mining environment in the revised "Mining Resources Law" as well.
